Clifford Amerson was my uncle, but since he was less than 4 years older, he was more like a big brother. There were lots of trees and bushes with non eatable red berries on the property beyond my grandmother,Beulah Amersons house . We built forts and shacks on that property with card board boxes we walked at least a mile to get. One day Cliff decided to smash the red berries all over his head and chest, ran in the house pretending to be injured. Of course this really scared grandma and she slapped him "up side his head" at least once before he ran out of the house.
Cliff had a kind heart always helping others, he did not know how to be mean to anyone unless they were threatening his family. He just wanted to be liked/loved and accepted. His God Given GIFT of playing the piano gave him some of the respect he deserved.
REST IN PEACE UNCLE CLIFF.
