“ As I sit here on my porch still waiting for you to come out and sit with me. It's a beautiful day. You would walk over and always said hey charlie warley. I made a little memorial between my house and yours. It's gonna be so pretty. I still can't believe you are gone. Doesn't seem real. I really miss your laugh. We all miss you dearly. Until we meet again my dear friend, rest peacefully.

“ I would miss her laughing at my jokes, and when I would fuss at her husband, she would be amen corner, here's a poem to you Laura. Though the radiance was once so bright is now forever taken from our sights, nothing can bring back the hour. We grief not, rather find strength in what remains behind.

“ Laura was one of a kind. She was a sweetheart. She called me every morning just to say hello. If I called her first she would answer it, white house amf we would laugh so hard. She came over once a week to watch a movie. Always came and sat on my porch. We watched cool cars go by. She loved the purple charger that always goes by. She sure did love to shop too. She was always at foreman mills lol last time she went she got me a bottle of perfume. I sure am gonna miss her. Her laugh was contagious. Rest peacefully my friend. As she would always say to me....I luhhhh you!! Till we meet again. ❤️
